SUMMER STUDY CLUB

Thursday July 24, 2008

Speaker: Walter Fain, D.D.S.

Topic: "The Pankey Philosophy"

Dr. L.D. Pankey was one of the five most influential dentists of the twentieth century. His approach to the practice of dentistry is as applicable today as it was in the fifties and sixties when he shared it with over 7,000 dentists. His approach to the behavioral aspects of dentistry will be highlighted.

Dr. Fain has been in private practice in Knoxville for 37 years. He began taking courses at The Pankey Institute in 1977, joined the visiting faculty in 1991, and is currently a member of the consulting faculty.

William H. McHorris, B.S.,D.D.S.,F.A.C.D.,F.I.C.D

Dr. William H. McHorris graduated from the University of Tennessee College of Dentistry in 1964, where he received the International College of Dentistry award for top scholastic achievement and graduated 1st in his class. He was President of his dental class and a member of OKU and the Dean's Society.

He is an active member of numerous dental organizations, including the Memphis, the Tennessee, the American Dental Association, the American Academy of Restorative Dentistry, and the International Academy of Gnathology. He is a fellow of the American College of Dentists and the International College of Dentists. He is past President of the American Academy of Restorative Dentistry and the International Academy of Gnathology.

Dr. McHorris lectures extensively on occlusal concepts, occlusal waxing procedures, extensive restorative procedures and treatments of TMJ disorders. He has published numerous articles on these subjects which are in booklet form as a "Compilation of Papers." He is chairman of the committee that formulated a "Glossary of Occlusal Terms" for the International Academy of Gnathology. Dr. McHorris has authored a teaching manual on occlusal concepts and occlusal waxing procedures that is currently in use at the dental schools in the United States and abroad. He was editor for the Occlusion and TMJ section of the Scientific Investigation Committee Report for the American Academy of Restorative Dentistry in 1985, 1986. This report is published annually in the Journal of Prosthetic Dentistry.

Dr. McHorris has devoted a great deal of time to the research of anterior teeth and has published several articles dealing with anterior teeth and the correct anterior disclusive angle (anterior guidance).

Dr. McHorris has been director and clinician for over sixty study groups in the United States, Australia, South America, Japan, and Europe. He maintains an active practice in Memphis, Tennessee and the treatment of TMD problems has occupied approximately 70% of his practice time for the last thirty-five years. He also works with medical groups in an attempt to coordinate medico-dental thinking in the recognition and treatment of TMJ disorders.

TOPIC AND COURSE DESCRIPTION:

"Occlusal Considerations and Clinical Tips in Restorative Dentistry"

It has been well documented that occlusal forces to teeth during nocturnal bruxism are in excess of 20 to 30 times the forces exerted during chewing. We must accept the fact that we cannot stop people from bruxing. As dental health professionals, it is our job to properly organize the mechanics of occlusion so as to minimize or eliminate these destructive forces during times of bruxing. If these forces are not controlled, the consequences can range from severely worn teeth, fractured cusps, mobile teeth, fatigued muscles, TMD symptoms, loss of overloaded implant fixtures to broken veneers and numerous types of restorative failures. All our restorative efforts can be compromised or lost from the phenomenal forces of Nocturnal Bruxism.

Attendees will learn:

1. Occlusion is the common denominator that must be dealt with in restorative dentistry.
2. The excessive forces of nocturnal bruxism are responsible for many restorative failures and ways to neutralize these forces must be provided for the patient.
3. When, why and how to use occlusal splints in TMD Therapy and as a prophylactic measure to protect restored cases.
4. Everyday clinical tips and techniques that consistently work for the restorative dentist.
